HEALTH REPORT by Dale

December 2009

MADE IT TO MEDICARE

I reached a milestone in my life; I will be eligible for Medicare January, 2010. I never thought I would live this long and now the government is going to help pay some of my medical care until the Lord calls me home or they run out of money. (I would not bet on which will happen first.) I am happy to get anything because I have paid through the nose all my life just to get to this point. I know that I will never ever get back all that I paid in, but I feel like I have won the lottery just to be getting my Medicare card. I guess they haven't heard about all the health issues that I have because no health insurance agency would ever talk to me if I was uninsured. I still feel great and I am looking good except for my big belly. The rest of my body appears to be a perfect specimen when I gaze into the mirror, but my big belly tells me that all is not well and that I have some work to do. My granddaughter Carlie talks about her PaPa with the big belly which obviously distinguishes me from her other PaPa. Consequently, I am not going to worry about my big belly anymore because my granddaughter doesn't care and she likes it. Besides, I will soon be on Medicare. Here's wishing you good health and happiness this holiday season.
